

THIS WEEK IN JACK DEGIOIA'S ADVENTURES: GEORGETOWN'S MULTIBILLION DOLLAR DONORS

An article published last week by the Business Insider website profiled Saudi Prince Alwaleed Bin Talal Bin Abdulaziz Alsaud, a billionaire investor who in 2005 donated $20 million to Georgetown to have the University's Center for Muslim-Christian Understanding named after him. The article quotes numerous former employees of the Prince who claim that Alwaleed "keeps in his entourage a group of dancing, laughing, joking dwarfs," and that he forced them to be used in a "midget tossing contest" for his amusement. Once, a source claims, Alwaleed tossed $100 bills into a bonfire, encouraging the dwarfs to run into the 'raging fire' and pull the money out, 'scorching themselves' in the process."

<http://blog.georgetownvoice.com/2012/01/16/gu-donor-prince-alwaleed-reportedly-employs-dwarfs-as-jesters/>

"$20 million in cash? Whooopeeeee!" - Jack DeGioia